You know that moment during a wedding reception when the bandleader or DJ asks all couples who have been married (or dating) for a certain number of years to hit the dance floor? That's called the anniversary dance, and it's one of the sweetest traditions around. Usually, once all the couples start dancing, the DJ will ask those who've been together for five years or less to leave the dance floor first, then couples of 10 years or less, and so on, until the longest-wed couple is left dancing with the newlyweds. As the two embark on the first day of their marriage, many guests have been together for 20, 30, and even 40 years or more, and that's definitely something worth celebrating! If you want to include this lovely custom during your reception, you should pick the song you want to play for that moment in advance. Choose an anniversary dance song based on the age group of your guests. A classic by The Beatles or Frank Sinatra is optimal if you have lots of grandparents, aunts, and uncles in attendance; if your crowd is younger, a modern indie love song makes a great choice. Any tune with a message of everlasting love is a good selection. We're big fans of Paul Simon's "Still Crazy After All These Years" and Billie Holiday's "As Time Goes By." Even better? Songs that look forward to even more years of happiness, like AI Green's "Let's Stay Together." Chances are, you've already considered one of these for your first dance song, so why not get a chance to play two songs that speak to you? Scroll through our 65 favorite anniversary dance songs and get ready for the emotional moment when all those happy couples hit the dance floor. 01 of 65 Lyrics of Love: "I met my old lover/On the wedding? If you have a significant number of married couples and older guests in attendance, it would be a sweet, sentimental touch to include them in the wedding with an anniversary dance. If the guest list skews younger, an anniversary dance may be lost on them. That said, your wedding is for you and your partner, and you can personalize it as you see fit. When does the anniversary dance take place? The anniversary dance takes place during the wedding reception, typically toward the end of the evening. It usually precedes the bouquet, garter toss, or cutting of the cake. How long does the anniversary dance last? The anniversary dance usually lasts for the duration of one full song. Some couples choose to include two songs to cater to different generations or music genres.
